Dear Mrs. Grant:

I returned several weeks ago from New York and have only just caught up with what I brought home from there. I am sorry to hear that you are off for the East so soon but I can proceed with the books while you are away. I find that I have the two photographs of you and if you can describe to me which one you prefer I can also do that or can leave that one until you return.

I have the materials on hand for the making of the books and will take them to the Binder within a few days. I regret to tell you that there has been an advance in price on the handmade papers that I have chosen for these books so that the cost of them will be a little higher than the price I gave you last year.

Hoping that you have a delightful trip and with best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,
