Dear Miss Gilpin:

I am forwarding to you today by air express a set of proofs and the corresponding manuscript for your book. Please read the proofs carefully, note any changes you may desire, and return them to me as promptly as possible.

We are proceeding rapidly with the manufacture of the book, and are very anxious to avoid any delay. In case you are unfamiliar with proofreaders' marks, a showing of them is in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, and it would be helpful if you used them.

Very truly yours,

HASTINGS HOUSE
