Dear Miss Gilpin:

Occasionally editors do have a bright spot in their lives, and I certainly had one yesterday when your book "Temples In Yucatan" arrived. Without a doubt it is the most delightful volume of its kind that I have ever seen. The photographs are superb, and the text and explanatory diagrams are beautifully handled.

I have not as yet had an opportunity to read all of the text, but look forward to this with considerable pleasure. When I was in College I had the good fortune to take several courses in anthropology under the late Dr. Frederick Starr, and I think I enjoyed the semester devoted to Mexico the most. I certainly wish this book had been available at that time, for the pictures and sketches recall to mind many highlights of that course.

It was kind of you to think of me, and I am indeed delighted to own an autographed copy of the book. Many thanks.

While the gravure reproduction no doubt does not do full justice to your print quality, I think it is very acceptable and the book should certainly be well received. I wish you every success with it, and you may be sure that we will tell the readers of POPULAR PHOTOGRAPHY that Laura Gilpin's book is out.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,
