Dear Miss Gilpin:

I was about to send off the Rosalie Aguilar Kodachrome for the March cover when it suddenly struck me that you had said at Los Alamos that she died.

On due reflection I decided it would be better not to use the transparency for a cover. I don't have any objection to using photographs of persons who have died if they are to be used as inside illustrations, but I feel the cover should reflect timeliness rather than the historic past. For that reason I decided against the cover.

I am returning it herewith, with due regret, since it would have made an attractive reproduction.

Cordially,

Geo. Fitzpatrick
