

use of study in the extremely well

I must say my first sight of the te was disappointing but that was ld by Miss Gilpin. compels this pub-t, she can assert: "Only one other so completely. for irrigation—that list of the workers, along its banks whoys, prospectors, sheepherders, cks, apple-growers, potato-pickers, ckers, goat raisers, citrus-growers

I salute you! divided into three sections: "The o's most beautiful mountains, but is comparatively recent and conse-STREAM portion, flowing through ut question, the greatest historie then follows the valley the crown of La Bajada that, again, is breath-taking. The river courses in pictures down the Middle valley through the cotton-picking territory to the border where Miss Gilpin wisely used only an obligatory number of pictures of industrial cities and subjects. The book takes its Old World aura again in the valley below Juarez, treats of cowboys in the Big Bend section, pays tribute to the charming little town of Cerralvo, oldest settlement in the entire valley of the Rio Grande, and closes with the delta section and the Confucian quotation, "A river, like truth, will flow on forever and have no end."

An appendix contains a chronology, facts about the Rio Grande, bibliography and glossary; in all, a complete book.

As a person of moderate means. at best, I have frequently resented reviewers glibly recommending books that cost $6 and more. Miss Gilpin's book is worth some skimming and budgeting and by all means, it should go down on Christmas lists for that most difficult person, the one "who has everything."
