Gentlemen:-

Yesterday an item arrived from you which I presume is an order I placed with your Chicago office. There must be some misunderstanding somewhere, as I was ordering a small pump to be used in connection with the registration board made by Eastman Kodak, for dye transfer prints. Through a local dealer I understood this to be some sort of hand pump costing something under $10. Otherwise I should never have ordered it sent C.O.D. without further information. I did not accept the shipment and it is being held for return to you at the local express office.

I am writing direct to Eastman Kodak Color Division for further information and will advise you regarding this when I hear from them. I greatly regret this misunderstanding,

Very truly yours,
