Mrs. Mary Carrington Nicholas,
The Roswell Museum,
Roswell, N.M.

Dear Mrs. Nicholas:-

Your letter was here last night when I returned from a trip to Taos. I am so sorry about the plaster letters. When you didn't mention them in your letter of Jan. 29th, I simply assumed that you did not want them. I will send them the first thing to-morrow morning.

Also I have been intending every day to answer that letter but I have been up to the ears, so to speak, in getting the show off to Washington in time to reach them for their opening date next week. It went off Friday, and now I hope to catch up again.

Eleanor Bedell is coming down with me, and I am not yet sure whether we come in her car or in mine, but I should like to see the show in your Museum and more or less get my bearings before the evening. So why don't we come direct to the Museum if that is not inconvenient for you?

I am looking forward to my visit with you very much indeed.

I am sorry about the letters, I doubtless misunderstood, and thought that you still did not want them, but I hope it will not be too late to add them.

Eleanor and I will get off, I hope by nine o'clock and I will telephone you when we reach Roswell if we do not find you at the Museum. Please do not interrupt your day, as I do not know just how long it will take us to drive down.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,
