Your Society takes pleasure in announcing the appointment of George I. Bell and his acceptance to the assignment of Associate Science Editor on Mountaineering.

Dr. Bell, a physicist at Los Alamos and member of the American Alpine Club has been an active climber for over seven years, having participated in notable ascents in the United States, Canada and Peru. Dr. Bell recently returned from northern Pakistan, where he participated in the dramatic and ill-fated attempt of the Third Karakoram Expedition 1953 to climb K-2, the second highest mountain in the world.

Due to an unfortunate but pardonable error in the handling of mail at the Santa Fe, New Mexico, post office, mail addressed to the Society during the latter part of December, 1953, was returned to the sender. This situation has been rectified and members are herewith advised to continue addressing their correspondence to the Society's headquarters at the above address. Should you have been inconvenienced in this manner, please re-mail your correspondence at your earliest convenience.
