Dear Laura:

There are very few things that have given Ray and me more pleasure than reading your article on the film, and we know that real communication does exist. We are grateful to you for so representing us all. A statement, like a film, is a very fragile thing; and if, at its first appearance the climate is not right, the whole course of feelings and actions can be changed.

We both send you warmest greetings and hope we all see each other soon.
