Dear Mrs. Collier:-

Thank you very much for your note. I have an awful confession to make. I have two cameras exactly alike, one I use with color, the other with black and white. When I was at your house, you may remember that I ran out hurriedly to get a camera, and the inevitable of-course, I got the color camera instead of the other. Result, very great underexposure. I knew that I would barely get by with the black and white. So I am so very sorry. The next time I come up, I will bring along the right one and try some more for you. Needless to say, I now have both cameras clearly marked on the top where I can see which is which quickly.

Hope all goes well with the book,

Sincerely yours,
