

Dear him Gammul :- How very thoughtful of you to send me such a lovely reminder of our very nice day together. Rain and all! The plaques are charming and are in use frequently. Thanks you so very much. It did me good to see you and your friend exploring our country just as a friend of mine and I explored yours some forty years ago. That figure seems impossible for our trip is still so vivid in my mind. And now could I forget the wonder of our first day on English soil - in May - at Hethley Abbey. Primroses in bloom and those wonderful trees + the beautiful ruin.

It was a great pleasure to me to show you just a tiny bit of our surroundings - so utterly different -

There is so much to see and do in this whole area, but it is all changing so fast. What an age we are living in and what is going to happen to us? What
