Dear Laura Gilpin:

S.O.S. I hope you have a carbon copy of your article on HISTORIC ARCHITECTURE. I have most of the articles for the Encyclopedia re-typed to a fixed word-line count. Your article was sent over to the typist a few days ago. Then....in returning the material it was lost by the messenger somewhere in-between offices. This leaves me in trouble to fill the space in this volume we are working on.

I have all your photographs, OK. Just the manuscript is missing. Can you airmail your copy of the article by return? Will appreciate having you make it special delivery. I'll have the article typed here in my office this time so no slip ups.

Even a hand written copy would be ok if nothing else is available.

Best,

Willard D. Morgan

If you have a photocopy machine you could make a copy that way and send me one set.
