Dear Mr. Gilpin:

In the spring issue of WESTERN REVIEW we are planning to run a group of black and white photographs on the theme The Photographer Views the Southwest.

We would very much like to see something of yours for this series. Pictures should be 5 by 7 glossies, and deadline is December 1. Although we cannot pay for the use of the photos, they will receive publicity in New Mexico and western Texas.

Needless to say, lush beauty is not what we're looking for particularly. Other magazines can handle that better than we. Rather, we're interested in force, strength, imagination, significance, insight--and skill.

May we see several of your pictures?

Sincerely,

(Mrs.) Irma Saffold
