Allie M. Lee Lease

This is to advise you that I reentered the No. 1 Allie M. Lee, recemented same across the San Andres formation, perforated in three zones and tested this well in the San Andres formation for oil producing capabilities. The San Andres formation had not been tested when this well was previously drilled to the Devonian formation, and due to peculiarities in the area, namely large salt water flows in the shallow depths, I deemed it more economical to reenter this well than to drill a new one.

The reentry and recementing was successful, however, the results of the test were negative. On all tests in three different zones the well yielded only salt water with no shows of oil. I subsequently plugged the well on the 9th of August. I regret that the results of the reentry were non-commercial as I had anticipated potential producing possibilities.

Yours very truly,

Len Mayer
