I have so enjoyed the wonderful camera studies in your "Temples of Yucatan." I know how searchingly you have examined the buildings and think that perhaps you can help me.

On page 195 of Paul Westheim's "The Art of Ancient Mexico," he states, "The Castle and the Temple of the Tigres $\times\times$ impart a feeling of classicism $\times\times$ an ornament in the form of a "G" constitutes the horizontal edge of the roof line"

I have looked in vain at your photographs and at the photographs of these two Chichen Itza structures and the detailed drawings in Ignacio Marquina's "Arquitectura Prehispanica" for the "ornament in the form of a "G".

If there is such a "G" it would indeed be revealing in the research I am attempting. Any help that you could furnish would be greatly appreciated by,
Yours sincerely,
Fallis F. Rees
