Dear Mrs. Rawls:

When I returned from Fort Worth on December 13th, I found a box of five books here awaiting me. As you had written that you were ordering these and sent me the address for Carol Truax and for you, I sent these books as you instructed.

It seems that there is some misunderstanding at the University of Texas Press about these and they have been charged to my personal account. I wrote to Mr. Rice about a week ago that these should be billed to you unless you had sent in your check with your order. I hope that this is now all straightened out. And I trust the books reached their destination in good time.

With best wishes and thanks

Very truly yours,
