Dear Laura,

Hi! Here I am again. And after the same photo that I got from you before - the Palace of the Governors and the Plaza at Santa Fe. It was in black and white and I would greatly appreciate receiving it as soon as possible. I am working on a series of six social studies books which have to be published by August 1, and I have been given a killing deadline. Too much for one person but I am trying hard.

You must wonder what happened to the other book for which I ordered photos and then cancelled. Well, nothing. The whole program was shelved when it was about half finished and we don't know whether it will ever be picked up again or not. It was a good program and those of us who were working on it were very disappointed. Not everything we do is that much fun.

Hope you are well. I wish I could get out that way - it has been so many years now since I have been in New Mexico or Arizona but I have never stopped missing them. There are pleasures and advantages to being here but this morning I wonder what they are. We had a foot of snow over the weekend and that is quite a different matter than it is in the west. Everything freezes up completely and it is very hard to fight.

My very best and I will look forward to hearing from you soon.
