Dear Miss Gilpin:

Several Augusts ago my husband and I had the pleasure of spending an hour or two with you. You were gracious enough to invite us to your home after I phoned you. I mentioned to you at the time that I am a friend and ex-student of David Vestal.

While we were there, looking at some of your photographs, I expressed interest in purchasing a particular print that I loved. You quoted a price of $50. You said you would send it to New York when it was printed. Understandibly, we didn't receive it, and because of the nature of our lives, we did not persue.

At any rate, we do still love the photograph. In your book "The Enduring Navaho" it's titled "The Summer Shelter in the Cove" (1934).

Can we still order a copy? Is it still $50.?

If you can spare the time to send us a card or whatever, we'll be happy to send you a check and wait for it's delivery.

I know you are deeply involved in a book project and hope it and you are well.

We look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Thank you in advance and peace.

Sincerely,

Carolee Campbell
