Dear Laura:

An architect friend of mine, Robert S. McLandress, has received a grant from the National Endowment of the Arts. It will involve the study of the architecture of the Cliff dwellings used by the Indians of Arizona, Colorado, and New Mexico. The specific intent is to determine how the techniques they developed were used to control their environment.

He is concerned about how he might best be able to contact and work with the Navajos who now live there.

I felt that you might be able to help him and suggested that he contact you when he starts his project.

I hope I am not imposing on your busy schedule to listen to Bob when he calls you.

Many thanks for the very nice comments you have made on the work we have produced for you.

Best wishes for good health and good business for 1976 and many years to come.

Cordially,

Irwin Welcher
