Dear Miss Gilpin:

It's always hard, especially for a novice, to imagine what something is going to look like from a description. In Sina Brush's letter she describes "Feathered Serpent Columns, Yucatan" which is printed on Gaewelux paper as having a "velvety, very delicate finish."

I saw several of Gertrude Käsebier's old photographs which were quite light and indistinct which did not appeal to me.

I have been unable to find out anything about Gaewelux paper. I think I would like to have the "Feathered Serpent Columns" print but could you give me a bit more description. Also, do you know how many have been printed and will any more be printed?

I'm sorry to be such a bother but I will not be in Santa Fe for sometime again to see the print in person. Thanks for this extra trouble.

Sincerely,

Chris Petteys
