Dear Ms. Brush:

Thank you for your letter. I am really excited.
A photographer friend advises me that dust spots are a common problem, especially with large negatives and large prints. I trust the spots won't be visible when the print is viewed frontally.

My friend advises that you probably ship prints mounted on archival (acid-free) boards, ready for matting, and that each print is probably titled and signed by Miss Gilpin. Is this your practice?

Would you recommend particular matboard materials or designs over other materials or designs?

Please advise as to method and time of payment.

Sincerely,

David Redmon
