Dear Ms. Brush:

As we discussed in our phone call yesterday, WETA-TV, public television in Washington, D.C., is very interested in using Miss Gilpin's photographs in our upcoming documentary on coal mining on Navajo land and its effect on the Navajo people.

We are particularly interested in using photographs that portray the history of the Navajo people and the unique relationship they share with the land. We will be using the history of the Navajo people as they told it to us when we were out there last month. To illustrate this history, we would like to use black and white stills which date back to the 30's and 40's and continue up to the present. We are also interested in close-up portraits of the Navajos. In another section, we plan to show the special beauty of the Southwest and would like to intercut our film footage with any color photos of the Navajos on the land which you may have. I understand from our conversation that the number of color photos available is limited, but any that you may have will be greatly appreciated.

The program will be aired nationally on PBS on January 30, 1980. We will be giving a credit to both Miss Gilpin and the University of Texas Press. In addition, we will be sending you a check for $50. We greatly appreciate the fact that you are not charging us the usual reproduction fee.

Thank you for all your time and effort with this request. Please let me know if we can ever be of assistance to you or Miss Gilpin.

Sincerely,
