Austin, Texas.

Dear Mr. Wardlaw:-

To-morrow is the day I should be shipping you the completed work of THE ENDURING NAVAHO. But I am not quite there. Little did I ever dream of the amount of research, of checking and double checking that I have had to do. The manuscript will be ready to go to a professional typeset early next week. Then there are some more, not too many, ~~more~~ final reproduction prints to make. This past week has been one of constant interruptions, matters I just couldn't put aside, but I shall hope for clear sailing this coming week.

You have been very patient, and I hope you will still be interested in the book when it finally does arrive which will be very soon.

Most sincerely
