Mrs. Barbara Spielman,
University of Texas Press,
Austin, Texas.

Dear Mrs. Spielman:-

I got such a shock when Mrs. Toulouse found that dreadful sentence on Molds that the only thing to do was to call you at once. How that could have gotten by me first of all, and then all the experts who have gone over this book, and in particular John Adair THE expert on silversmithing, I just don't know. I would have hated to call attention to it with an errata slip.

I failed to give you one other wrong capitalization which I had found:- page 106, col 2 line 9 Navaho Tribal Park. The last two words were in lower case in the midst of all the other National Parks and Monuments. This must be a typo for it is correct in my dummy. Mercy! I hope we have come to the end of all this. You probably caught this one any way, but I send this on just in case.

It was good news to know that Mr. Wardlaw is back and that he had such a successful trip. I am dropping him a line about the pre-review in El Palacio.

My team is hard at work on indexing and we will get together in a few days to see how it is all coming.

Hoping that all the links are now joining up and that it will not be too long before the presses start rolling, I am,

Most sincerely,
