Dear Miss Downs:-

You have certainly solved the problems on the book and I am very much relieved. The books has worked out so well that it seemed a pity not to correct these two trouble spots. Now that you have removed the page of hands and I think it would also be a good thing to remove that extra page of heads at the beginning of the book. This would simplify it and I think improve it. Those heads and hands were originally planned for end papers and now that they are ruled out I don't think they help anything by using them in any other way. So if it is not too late to say remove the pages up front also, let's do it. I believe that you will agree with me. Now I feel quite satisfied in thinking about it, and most happy about everything. The book is going to be better than even dared to hope. And to you many thanks again for all your fine work.

With the best of wishes,

most sincerely
