

The Navaho make use of gatherings to discuss either local or tribal problems. During the day at a squaw dance in 1934, we found this gathering men from the Red Rock region holding such discussions.

Following the erection of the new Tribal Council building at Window Rock, the Council holds all its meetings here. On the walls of the building are the beautiful murals depicting the life and history of the Navaho painted by the Navaho artist Gerald Nailor.

With Sam Ahkeah as Chairman, Manuelito Begay rises to discuss problems in his Crown Point area.
