Dear Laura:

I should have explained it more in detail but if you had looked at the page number you would have seen that this now reads page 238 and faces the Appendix matter. I think it has all worked out exactly as you wished it to. I hope so anyway.

"Battle of Brazitos" has already been changed to the singular of "battle" and the change on page 239. I sent you page 84 when I had the idea that there was a change in the sinkage at the head of the page; this proved to be incorrect.

You seem to have had unnecessary difficulties on the Navaho book and I hope everything is running smoothly now. From your description of McComb's book I don't see any reason for either one of us having to worry about competition of the two titles. McComb is a great photographer but there is nothing to me indicating he knows about Navahoes, so let's change neither the date nor the plans.

The sales on the Rio Grande have not been discouraging and the book still goes on and will go on I hope, for sometime to come.

From what I can gather now, there ^{will be} ~~is~~ $240.00 in royalties alone - this is without deductions, if there are any for book purposes.

Sincerely,

Walter L. Goodwin, Jr.
