Dear Walter;

Since I saw you two years ago, I seem to have been as as busy as ever, and have neglected writing to you to find out how many copies you now have left of "Temples in Yucatan". I remember that you told me you had 750 unbound copies, and of course, I knew they had appeared in the bookstores again. May I order 10 copies from you direct, as I am getting requests for this book, and sometimes the Villagra Bookstore here is out of stock. If you are down to just a small remainder of unsold copies, perhaps I should take all you have left. Please let me know how this stands.

I am very glad that you liked my "Enduring Navajo". It is still doing very well and I am pleased to say the 4th printing is under-way right now. Considering the fact of the small sales department of the University Press, I think it has done extremely well for this priced book. This year it seems to be doing better than ever.

I am having constant calls for both "The Pueblos, A Camera Chronicle" and "Temples in Yucatan" and I am wondering if it is worth considering new editions. With best wishes for your continued success.

Cordially yours,

Laura Gilpin
