Map of Argentina

For many of us American history begins with Columbus and the New World, as it has been erroneously called. The thrilling & amazing work of Archaeologists during the past 25 years has unfolded a history as old as Egypt. Proof has come to light that the American Indian came to this country many hundreds of years ago, ^{from Asia} across Bering Strait. They turned Southward slowly working their way down the North American Continent and into South America. In the fertile valley of Mexico the highest development of these people was reached. * It was here that they found a wild plant from which they developed corn. With corn for food, branches of these Indians wandered back to New Mexico, Arizona & Colorado, & it is with these groups that we now deal.

2. During the past 50 years many remarkable ruins have been found in these states. Those with which we deal here are situated in the two river drainages of the San Juan river, rising in Colo; flowing in a westerly direction to the Colorado river; and the Rio Grande river, rising also in Colo. and flowing in a South easterly direction. You will note on the map the location of the ruins of Mesa Verde, Mesa Verde, Kootenai, Balcones, Canyon de Chelly, Chaco Canyon, & Tuzigoot. All of these ruins were inhabited between the years 900 A.D. to 1300 A.D.
