Dear Nell,

I think I can understand the aching void you must be experiencing. In one sense it may never grow less for Betty was such a steadfast person that you will naturally turn in your thoughts to her for understanding and support in whatever comes to you in life. The only thing that mitigates it is that after the physical wrench of separation there seems to come a continuing sense of companionship in which one can take, as the years go on, an ever increasing joy. She has so much to give you in that companionship

Affectionately
