Dear Grandmother Nell,

I went to Livermore last week and read your letter to Mom and Dad. You sound like you're doing well. I'm fine, though business is rather slow. There is still plenty to do. The paperwork seems to never end. The store is doing fine compared to the other ones and I guess that is what counts.

A college friend is visiting this week so I have been busier than usual. Tonight he is ~~coming~~ at dinner with another friend so I am ~~staying~~ resting. I get tired of going out every night and shouldn't spend the money anyway.

I finally actually bought a copy of The Family of Man. I just figured out that you have three pictures in there. I always thought it was two. What was the last one, a woman holding a basket of flowers, taken? That was the one I didn't know was yours and I like it.

Nell is fine. Montana is very cold but I think she likes it. She keeps going back, so she must. I'm not sure what she'll do when she graduates, but I think Agri-business will be quite important in the future. She should be able to find work.

I hope you are fine and not too cold. Is the stream frozen? I remember fishing there with Peter. I wish I could be that little again. Still, I can have fun at 25.

Do write.

Much Love,

Tom
