Dear Nell,

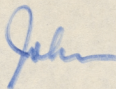

I tried to call you back this afternoon, but you had already gone for Easter. We had already ordered flowers delivered to you, so I hope somehow they finally are delivered to you.

The photograph arrived yesterday and is simply the most glorious thing we have ever seen. I should not have let you send us anything so precious, so priceless and so beautiful. But it will be our greatest treasure.

We are rushing to get ready to go for the Good Friday Vigil. We will pray thanksgiving that your problem there has been solved, because I know how much this solution must come as a Godsend to you.

And I will write you again very soon.

Our Easter greetings, gratitude and great love,
