your return from Texas before mailing them to you. I also have "Dombey and Son" and a pair of bed slippers, I guess, all of which I shall return.

We would have to plant the grapes for you, because I plan to plant the paradise pear tree then anyway.

I have always bought such things from a wonderful little Nursery run by two brothers in Yalesville. Their stock is very special and yet less than people like Henderson or Dreer etc. etc.

What kind of grapes do you want Concord and Niagara? They are the sturdy ones. I hope the soil about the arbor is good. I do not recall it at all.

Nell most darling,

It is a magic night the moon is shining on the sparkling snow - all is still - still - so still. And Conniput Red House is being guarded by a Snow Unicorn. A great handsome one glistening white ice in his frozen mane and tail. We all made him this afternoon. Now he stands enchanted, waiting for the moon to top the dark pines when

When I get through with my cards I will most certainly have Augustus A. Sparrow contact him concerning a postmortem sitting. Was he at all interested in writing a story?

The prospect of having you here for the party is entirely too much to hope for, I mean it would be such a thing as one might dream of but too heavenly to be real. How can you possibly such enchantment? Did some spirit from the world of stars and light brush his wings across your baby face when you first lay in your cradle? Some such sprite is indeed yours, for who could you ever have with you the power of magic that you have. I have you.

Enclosed is a sketch for Nellie to look at if you wish. The dresses and accessories would be worked out in detail under the heads given. I should prefer using a pink organdie — the middle. I like it worked look under plain. You are so a Christmas Season Now
