

such small, simple acts. I can write to Bill and try to put that straight in my life - which I did. I can try to plan, to lay the pieces all out in the open - and put my heart into the job. There are more pieces than seems possible - but somehow they all will fit. Just think of the world's pieces to fit!

Keep hold of the thing we have found - it is the fearless and true life and worthy of our hearts and minds. The important thing is not Dan, or Jerry, or Dell - but you. You can't run away from yourself - you must live with yourself and be proud to be happy. I have more pride in myself in these past days than for a long time - proud to do the difficult task. God bless my John. Ever. D.

Dearest:

It is not easy to part with you! I feel shaken and not sure of my guidance. Ah, how much of my life has been shaking! Either I was parting from my mother, father, children, grand children - or you! I came home and had a quiet time - in fact all day has been a quiet time. To-night I feel more serene. The stars are exactly as they were when you and I stood together under them last night. Nothing is changed really - although everything seems to change continually.

I confess that your problems frighten me for I get no guidance on them - and don't feel that you are sure enough of yours. Existence is enchantment - and disenchantment - at one point everything to make life beautiful -

3. the answer lies. They will see it in your eyes — when it is there — not before. God bless you clearest for that is my prayer. Help us both. Help us together and in our individual battles. It is something greater than we are that we seek.

Always when I try to "analyze" the Down Co problems with you, it ends the same. That is not the way I can help. I have my intuitions — but they are not yours — but I have no proof of their virtue. I simply can't get from you any clarity in them — and I end by inheriting all your fears, without your optimism. It is so simple at Mackinac to talk of changing the world but the only way I can help is to do

2. at another point, everything to make it difficult, confused and frightening. If I can take these both to my heart — perhaps I might find the answer — peace. One feels a new humility in the face of this new way of seeing. But humility needs guidance — and in order to be used at all — must have a pathway cleared to walk. Otherwise it is so easily trampled on, ignored — or not even recognized.

So John darling here is to the new spirit that can unite us as never before — but that can also uphold us as enemies in the face of our Lord. You will be more that you want to be yourself and I, too. You are the leader of your men — first you must get your guidance and have faith in your leading — know which direction to turn and where
