

4.

I have you with me as a Power - and as a Rock of Ages.

All your troubles I can hold lightly from this distance and see your great soul struggling with them - and making more - yet always undaunted and always marching on. I have great faith in you, dearest - more than you have in yourself - I realize that I must not try to lead you - for they are far beyond me - but I will endeavor to keep a little corner for you to come back to from the center of the ring.
 God bless and keep us straight ever 2.

Dearest..

I tore up my letter of last night when I read it this morning. It must have been the moon-shine and I did not feel too well.
 This morning I felt much better and the world looked much more secure in every way. What a foolish wife you married! As if I could walk right out on a moon-path to the garden behind the moon. It is hard to know sometimes what are the realities in this world ——— and how much the other world influences this. Somewhere the whip-poor-will tells me more

3. Tonight get things all straightened out for you. Hopeless!

Now I have been waiting all day to hear about Bushie - What the verdict is. How I ache to help. I will wait and pray.
I was sure you would call to-night - but not.

Am feeling better - almost O.K. again - the weather is heavenly and all looks well.
I can't see beyond - but I refuse to try to pry. Sufficient unto the Day.

Good night Sweet Prince - the moon is sliding down a cedar tree to your room - I miss you too dearly!
don't ever think otherwise - yet

2. than the man on the radio.

But now see here - I must not start another moon-struck letter!

Your letter to-day including the "subject - Refrigerator" was very comforting - and amusing.
Your letters are so "jisky" - your mind and pen jumps nimbly from poor Du Bois walking across the bridge against your wishes to the tea with the over-ripe melon - to the rotting hay in the pig-pen - all in one sentence! And not explaining any. I smile as I read and love it all - and you - yet wishing I
