Dear Mrs. Dorr:

Thank you so much for your letter which I was, of course, delighted to get. I will say that its contents did not surprise me because to me too, it made no sense that any photographer should sell exclusive rights to such photos. I began to get suspicious when I came across other photos that appear in the book in other publications. There are photos in their other books of pictures which I sometimes want to use, but it is not always possible to acquire the address of the photographer. I got yours through the Museum of Modern Art. This is certainly most unethical on the part of Hill & Wang and I wish something could be done to put a stop to it.

About the prints, by no means trouble yourself about them before you take your vacation. If you can get them to me after your return, I would very much like to have them. I used two other photos from the book in a previous publication of ours and they did not come out at all well when reproduced directly from the book. I wish the best possible quality - all of the photos I am using are unusually good and I would like to maintain the quality.

Again, my thanks for your prompt answer - I shall look forward to hearing from you again in the future.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth F. Wilder
