The main object in mind when I made "The Golden Key" was to reach out to the world with a message of love and the labor I put into it has been given without financial reward, as I felt sure I could market it so that the income from selling the movie would be sufficient to cover its cost.

I have made intensive efforts to sell my movie, but regret to state that my findings have been that the movie is regarded to have no commercial value and it would appear at the present time that no income can be expected from it.

I did find considerable interest for the movie among libraries and various public charitable institutions, but unfortunately showings at such places do not produce any income.
