Dear Nell,

Just a note to tell you again that I'm really overwhelmed by THE BARE FEET.

We have all looked at it now and find the photography as hear perfect as God and man could possibly create.

I'm going to begin taking it around just as soon as our transportation situation gets back to normal, although I have already shown it to the UNESCO people and a representative of the Carnegie Corporation simply for their own pleasure.

Were any of the photographs in the book actually made from the Polaroid camera, or did you use it simply to introduce yourself to the community? I would like to get a little note from you on the use of the Polaroid because we may have to go to Mr. Land for sponsorship.

* The very much tattered clippings enclosed herewith represent an exhibition of rugs which were made in Mexico by Mexicans under the direction of two artist friends of ours, Edwin and Mary Schier. The large rug, beside which the artist is standing in one of the photographs, is one which Jackie and I bought. The colors of this one are black and white. If you are at all interested in these rugs, let me know. I'm sure we could arrange to get them to you or you to them.

Best to you both.

Sincerely,
B.

Burton Cumming
