Dear Cousin Nell:

The inscription you wrote in the copy of Mother and Child is most comforting. I am deeply grateful to you for your thoughtfulness and understanding. The book itself carries such a wonderful message and is a joy to have.

It seems so cruel that Vinton should have been denied the happiness and joy of seeing Pamela and Terry grow up and develop. He so adored them. They in turn have been deprived of a true and steady guiding light - he gave so much of himself to everyone and had such a wealth of goodness and human understanding -

The future looks so bleak without Vint's love and devotion but we know we must go forward with strength and courage and hope—
and for that we shall strive.

Most sincerely,

Kathleen Lawrence
