Dear Miss Goodwin,

I suddenly realized that I never answered your kind letter at least to tell you with great pleasure that the package of books arrived safely — Being about to give birth I have taken to "neaten the nest" and find that my desk and its pile of correspondence stays unattended. So - now at the last, I write.

We are very eager to see Bare Feet knowing that it is perfect — because of New. How we wish there were not this broad country between Connecticut and California! It was a treat to live as close as Boston.

I certainly shall write you when I see my store of books becoming dangerously low — and hope that we will meet you when we are next East. Warm Regards — my "8" on the end does look like an "e".... but more careful!
