My dear Mr. Smith:

I thank you for your letter and the suggestion as to where I can borrow a copy of the World's Work.

I wonder if you could send a photograph of yourself and one of your house.

As for the other pictures to go with the story, I have thirty in the hands of four editors and in a week or so I probably will get enough back from one or another to illustrate the article about yourself, if you will send one of yourself and of your ranch. Of course if the photograph of yourself was in front of your house that might achieve the double purpose.

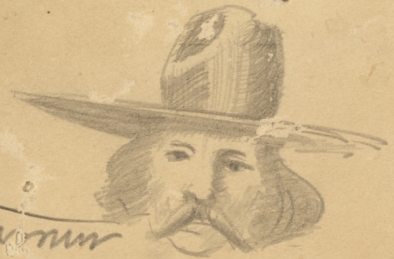

With best wishes,

Matthew Paxton

P.S. I changed Goodnight's article until you would not recognize it. I must confess that I am well pleased with it, and believe it has a good chance to go over, especially since it has such fine pictures.
