Dear Dr. Porter:

Just a short note of appreciation concerning your visit with us. As you well realize, we all have enjoyed your visit and I think that most of your listeners have a better understanding of what it takes to produce work of the calibre you have accustomed us to seeing.

I am most appreciative as well for your introductory remarks about "concerned photography" and your closing statement about how indivisible "concern" is. I wonder if you could send me a copy of those excerpts from your talk and would permit their publication.

I hope that, on your next trip to New York, I shall have the pleasure of meeting you again.

With best wishes, I remain --

Sincerely,

Cornell Capa

The Fund

seeks to encourage and assist photographers of all ages and nationalities who are vitally concerned with their world and times. It aims not only to find and help new talents, but also to uncover and preserve forgotten archives and to present such work to the public.

Established in 1966 in memory of Werner Bischof (1916-1954), Robert Capa (1913-1954) and David Seymour-"Chim" (1911-1956).
