Dearest Eliot,

The possibility of a second Mexico book thrills me. Immediately I rummaged in my "Iffi" files and extracted a somewhat meager nonreligious slide-batch. I took more b.+w. pictures outside the churches. As I have no real idea of the book's scope and meaning, I chose a "mixed" mixture. I withdrew some, like the tourist butterfly net fishermen, when I discovered a print of yours of the same subject. — Of the Teotitlan weavers I have almost better ones in b.+w. (Whatever happened to that film?) I would regret very much if no black and whites were used. I have a series of market-people, where color is not as imperative as in the church photos. I don't know whether Donna Pierce wants again some—thing written by us (or is that up to you?

to us?) but when I send the pictures I plan to write something, that strikes me very much about the attitudes of the market people and the role the markets
played.

Some prints are not very good, but it seems premature to make new ones.
In about a week at the latest I hope to send you slides and prints.

I offer you again any cooperation and help, that you feel I could contribute.

Enclosed is my itinerary for July.

In August and September I will be in and around New York. At least these are my intentions

Dearest Eliot, many good wishes with lots of love

Ellen
