Dear StuCart and Scott Gentling:

The story about you in Dallas Life Magazine motivates this communique. I want to ask you if you have read The Luck of Huemac by Daniel Peters. It does seem that you brothers have another brother, in a sense, in Peters. If you have not read the book do so, and I think you will agree.

This novel is a supremely detailed, authentic, passionate recreation of the Aztecs and their empire, and includes the coming of Cortes; Scott may find it useful regardless of how much he knows already. As I say, I think Peters is a brother. Maybe in a previous incarnation? Anyway, if you haven't read it, do so. It will haunt you.

Mr. Peters has been informed by his publisher, Random House, that the book is now out of print, but you can probably find a copy at Taylor's or Cokesbury's or another large book store in Fort Worth.

Daniel Peters has done in words what you are doing visually. You two -- you three -- should know one another.

Meanwhile, gung ho on your projects. And hang in there on the eye surgery. The medicos do wonders for the eyes these days.

Cheers,

Linda
