Dear Mr. and Mrs. Garrett:

The public's response to our new exhibition, Encountering the New World, 1493-1800 has been exciting, and the Museum's education department has scheduled a number of public lectures and films related to the works on display. However, we have a special program planned for members of the Amon Carter Museum's library study group on Wednesday evening, January 29, at 7:00 p.m.

Fort Worth artists Stuart and Scott Gentling have studied the Aztec culture and pre-Columbian America since 1970, focusing their studies on the ancient capital of Tenochtitlan. I have asked them to give our group an informal tour of the exhibition and share their knowledge of this fascinating group of objects.

I know you join me in anticipating this special tour. Please mark your calendars for the 29th, and return the enclosed reservation postcard. I look forward to seeing you.

Sincerely,

Dear Stuart:

The many compliments that I heard regarding your talk confirm that the evening was a success. Thanks so much for sharing your observations with the library study group. And I also want to thank Scott for allowing you to bring his journal to share with the group. We felt very privileged to see your progress to date on what promises to be a real contribution to our visual perception of the Aztecs.

Thanks again for helping us out; I look forward to seeing you again.

Regards,
