During the American Indian Wars, Ft. Worth's active U.S. Army fort was located near this site, from June 6, 1849 until September 17, 1853. Eleven young soldiers died here serving their country. Their records were misplaced during the American Civil War, and only recently, the original medical reports of their deaths were discovered, through lengthy research in the National Archives. 'Pioneers Rest Cemetery' was the original burial grounds for the fort and for the city that grew up around it. The eleven soldiers formerly unknown, from companies of the 2nd Regiment, U.S. Dragoons and the 8th Regiment, U.S. Infantry, interred on these grounds are:

Private Isaac Hollyfield
 Private Michael Parrell
 Corporal Michael McKee
 Private Michael Crehan
 Private James Ryan
 Private Patrick Dolan
 Private Peter Riley
 Corporal Thomas Scott
 Private John A. Koch
 Private William McConnell
 Private Jeremiah Long
