

RON MOORE

Quart & Scott

This weekend I finished reading the book you so graciously gave me. I am overwhelmed by so much about it — the beauty of the art, the scope of the project, Audobon tragedies and victories, and the long winding road of your own stories. I will always treasure the gift and have been enriched by the reading of it.

I have copied a few sentences out of the John Graves essay - a poignant paragraph about his sense of "home" identity. There's a sensitivity there which I lack and will therefore use somewhere.

I look forward to the next occasion of being together. See you at the Soirée (#8) in October.
