Dear Scott,

Since over a month has gone by since your letter indicating that you wished a quick get-together so that all of our business and accounts could be settled with no word from you, Donald has asked me to drop you a note to remind you of our pending affairs. Why don't you give us a call when you get this and let us know when you wish to come over. It will be best that we know in advance, as Donald spends a great deal of time during the summer out on appointments.

We know that you look great! Barley saw you on TV Sunday, and squealed "There's my friend, Scott!" so we all had a look-see. You come across very well on the tube -- good personality for that sort of thing. Barley also keeps asking when her friend Scott is coming to see her, and since we have been expecting you daily, we keep telling her, very soon.

I have thought a great deal about your mother and hope that she is now feeling very well and has her old marvelous energy and vitality back. Please give her our regards.

With all good wishes,

Betty Vogel
