Institute Spotlights History and Birds

A search by the Institute of Texan Cultures for old photographs of Texas families at work and play culminated in a special exhibition entitled, "Photo Heritage Day: Texas Families." These photographs, which have been loaned to the institute by citizens who were willing to share their treasures, came from the attics, garages, basements and photo albums of families throughout South and Central Texas.

The exhibition, which will be on display April 7 through 26, includes photographs from the 1840s through the 1950s. Copies of some of the images in the show will be added to the institute's permanent collection.

Continuing at the institute through April 5 is a collection of watercolor images of Texas bird life of Scott and Stuart Gentling. Consisting of 39 paintings, the exhibition is on loan from the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History.

The Gentlings, twin brothers from Fort Worth, collaborated on their first bird painting at the age of 16. It took eight years to complete the work included in this exhibition.

The institute is located at Durango Boulevard and Bowie Street in HemisFair Plaza.
