Dear Stuart

Here are images of the four sides of the stone column - 3 figures and a star.
These are TERRIBLE photos. I am not a good photographer, and it was especially hard to photograph this piece because it is relief-carved. Even though the relief is deep, I had to turn the contrast way up to get it to show. The result is very grainy, and also with a lot of white highlights that are not visible in person. But you should have no trouble reading the imagery with your knowledge. This was broken at the bottom off of a longer column (perhaps there were only figures at the top and the digger broke it off), also a couple of chips at the top where the top of one figure and the tip of the star are lost.

This piece was originally at the Stendahl Gallery. Way back in the 50's Earl Stendahl exhibited it at 6 Museums in Europe.

The height is approx. 10"

I can't wait to hear your analysis!

Best Regards

Leonard
